Jobs & Volunteer Opportunities in East Texas

Meet Cory Creamer, Business Analyst at the Mercy Ships International Operations Center:

"I first heard of Mercy Ships when 60 Minutes did a story on them. I loved the message of hope Mercy Ships brings. I work in Information Services and support the Human Resources systems. I have been able to roll out an online version of our volunteer application, eliminating the need for the paper application. I love knowing that the work I do here has a Kingdom impact. It isn't just those that serve 'on the front lines,' but also those (like me) who support the work being done there. My work keeps me in a place of gratitude. When I see the lives of the people we help in Africa, my problems seem much smaller. And I get to work with a great group of people!"

"You do not have to have ministerial skills to be called to a ministry, and you do not have to travel overseas to support mission work. God created you with special abilities, which you can use to love God and serve the forgotten poor of Africa from here in East Texas."

"The question is no longer if we are called to leverage our lives for the Great Commission, only where and how."

INTERNATIONAL VOLUNTEER OPPORTUNITIES

Meet Gabriela Bertova, volunteer Inventory Controller serving on the Africa Mercy:

Gabriela says, "When the right time came, and I felt God was calling me to Mercy Ships, I told Him, 'You get the money, and I'll go.' Well, he got the money, and I went – the pieces of the puzzle fell in perfectly." She works in a non-medical role that is vital to the successful functioning of the crew because she makes sure necessary supplies are provided. And to anyone thinking about volunteering with Mercy Ships, she advises, "Just do it! You don't have to stay for your whole life ... but you may find your life's calling."

It takes all kinds, with all skills.
